Between Scientists & Citizens Conference

We are increasingly dependent on advice from experts in making decisions in our personal, professional, and civic lives. But as our dependence on experts has grown, new media have broken down the institutional barriers between the technical, personal and civic realms, and we are inundated with purported science from all sides. Many share a sense that science has lost its “rightful place” in our deliberations. This conference gathers scholars from the humanities and social sciences to deepen our understanding of effective and appropriate science communication in policy controversies.

Keynote addresses:
- Massimo Pigliucci, “Nonsense on stilts about science: Field adventures of a scientist-philosopher”
- Sally Jackson, “Black box arguments and accountability of experts to the public”

Glamour’s Top Ten College Women Scholarship

This contest, now in its 56th year, annually recognizes ten of the most accomplished college juniors from across the U.S. and Canada.

All ten winners receive $3,000 and a trip to New York, and are featured in the May issue of Glamour, while one grand prize winner will take home $20,000 for her tuition and projects.

You can get more information here: http://www.glamour.com/about/top-10-college-women

This contest is open to all female students who will be juniors this coming fall. All physical materials must be received in one package and sent in by the early deadline of July 15th. All questions may be directed to TTCW@glamour.com.
Don’t Forget!

No matter your college, as an Honors student you are required to take Honors Seminars as part of your Honors experience. Don’t forget to register for a seminar if you plan to take one next term! Several sections are already full, but low-enrollment sections may be cancelled, so register to make sure your chosen seminar will run. Click on the “Honors Opportunities” link from the Honors homepage (http://www.honors.iastate.edu) for the schedule of seminars.
